

YET ARTIST LIVES BE GOOD

there once was a bard lost within century's tales he spoke of gathering rosebuds while ye may we are mere and we should have no fear we are artists that can break even heaven's spear we can break heaven's spear for we have poets like sublime beauty, we can make bridges across stars see, we are free beyond breathing the dancing trees we recapture moments lost, like photographing with "but i must!"

heaven spoke of the air we breathe, they told tales of the ocean the stars spoke of our trees, what soul can experience in passing moments we are artists, we polish our skills like we paint our canvas we dance and twirl with a grimace to every pain and dramas the stars envy artist for we have brighter sparks flames so strong it would clog your throat in a second love itself envy us for our methods of affectionate remarks sublime is met when humanity is sought and at attention to feel the breeze of a summer's morning broth having coffee to a sunrise cost to feel the coldness of a moonlight while you are lost it makes us venture beyond what human is capable of it echoes our names written in sand, never set in stone that we are mere for we have no fear rightfully smearing our lives in time with every turn burning passion, in ways of freedom and to yearn

BREAKDOWN

STANZA 1

In Stanza 1, line 1 and 2: “there once was a bard” & “he spoke of gathering rosebuds while ye may” is said by 1-4 ‘main characters. sabay speaking

In Line 3 and 4 within the same stanza, everyone speaks, emphasis on “we are mere”, “no fear” and “we are artists”

STANZA 2

New 1-4 new main characters for line 1 then line 2-3, solo or duo from the new main characters.

Line 4: loudest main character speaks, emphasis on “but I must!”

STANZA 3

Pick 4 of the most maarte/theater kid-ish, they solo per line

STANZA 4

All speak

STANZA 5

the group from stanza 3 speaks each line

STANZA 6

All speak? maybe?

TONE/s TO EMPHASIZE

Stanza 1- Reminiscing

Stanza 2- Inspiring

Stanza 3 & 4- Gratefulness

Stanza 5- Refreshing, like a waking up in the morning and smelling fresh air

Stanza 6- Inspiring